It's 1987, and Sightseers Are Quite the Sight to See

■ Retired award-winning Washington Post photojournalist Lucian Perkins's exhibition "They Came From Beyond the Beltway: Tourists at the National Mall" may as well have been called "1987," the year these images were created. Big hair and short-shorts dominate scenes where tourism equals fidgety kids and interminable waits. Unfortunately, though, there's not enough of a good thing: One leaves wishing the series stretched into the 1990s and oughts.
